Wallops Mission 2000, a road map guiding the facility into the next century, was unveiled by NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin and Congressional members representing Virginia and Maryland to a packed house on July 21.

During the one-hour employee gathering, Goldin, joined by Senators Barbara Mikulski and Paul Sarbanes, Congressmen Herb Bateman and Wayne Gilchrest, Navy Commander Richard White, Virginia Spaceport Executive Director Billie Reed, and Goddard Director Joe Rothenberg, praised the work conducted by the Wallops employees and emphasized the important role Wallops will play in the future of NASA.

Employees who did not receive a copy of the Wallops Mission 2000 Implementation Plan can pick one up in the Public Affairs Office, Bldg. F-6, Room 108.

Mission 2000 Logo Contest

Goddard Director Joe Rothenberg announced a logo contest at the conclusion of the employee Mission 2000 unveiling on July 21. Following are the basic guidelines for the contest.

1. The contest is open to NASA Wallops civil servant and contractor employees and on-site partner employees.
2. The theme should center around the Wallops Mission 2000.
3. The deadline for submissions to the Public Affairs Office is close-of-business August 15.
4. The submissions will be displayed in the cafeteria and voted on by employees on August 20. The top four vote-getters will be sent to Greenbelt graphics to be placed on an even artistic level and NASA graphic standards.
5. Employees will vote on the final four in mid-September.

NOTE: Never modify the NASA insignia (meatball) in any way — whether by adding, eliminating or otherwise changing design elements.

If you have any questions concerning the logo contest, call the Public Affairs Office at x1584.
